

Julia Lennon

Julian Lennon has always felt that he has observed life differently, perhaps because his path through life has been so unusual.

Nothing could be more apparent, as he reveals to the viewer his keen eye for composition and his gift for capturing an intimate moment.

Julian seeks to depict his personal journey as an artist in the midst of unique life experiences.

Born in Liverpool, England, Julian Lennon began his artistic trajectory at a young age with an inherent gift for playing musical instruments. Those abilities would soon broaden into the cinematic and visual arts. As an observer of life in all its forms, Julian developed his personal expression through such mediums as music, documentary filmmaking, philanthropy, and now photography. TIMELESS, his first photo exhibition, staged in Manhattan in September 2010, debuted Julian's considerable talents behind the camera, as seen in photographs of U2 and his painterly landscapes. Since then, he has had multiple exhibitions throughout the US and Europe, many of which have included his ALONE collection, followed by HORIZON which reconciled photography with philanthropy, the results of a Charity: Water and White Feather Foundation initiative, bringing critically needed clean drinking water to parts of Africa. During these travels through Kenya and Ethiopia, Julian captured a wide variety of images with the intention of inspiring viewers to learn about unique indigenous cultures, meanwhile raising awareness of their plights.

Leica Gallery Los Angeles presented
Julian's latest collection, CYCLE, in September 2016.
"A glimpse through the picture window, into the Cycle of Life, of those living on the borders of the South China Sea."

“There’s a Circle in our lives, that keeps us going round,
and with every revolution, there is something to be found.
It’s the essence of the moment, it’s the understanding why, it’s the road to resolution, it’s the journey to the sky....”

The principal goal behind Julian's series, HORIZON, is to marry photography with philanthropy. His attuned worldview led him to see first-hand, the results of a Charity: Water and The White Feather Foundation initiative, bringing critically needed clean drinking water to parts of Africa. Simultaneously, his conservation and humanitarian efforts overlapped with support work being developed with Millennium Villages Project. During these travels through Kenya and Ethiopia, Julian captured a wide variety of images, with the intention of inspiring viewers to learn about unique indigenous cultures and to help raise awareness of their plights. Its signature image, Horizon, juxtaposes man and nature in a meditative solo walk upon a majestic mountaintop. The beauty of landscape shots like Follow and Scopium find a complement in the humanity of others, among them: Reverence, with a group of tribal elders focused intently, during a community gathering, to discuss clean water and their environment; and Hope, a bright-eyed Ethiopian child, with a wise, yet insightful vision, of life yet to come....

Empathy, says Julian Lennon, is the bond that unites the planet. He offers, "We are all in this together, and hopefully someday, the world will realize that... and photography is one way to share, learn, appreciate and understand about other cultures and empathize with other peoples lives..."
